

19th European Space Weather Week

20-24 November 2023

Hybrid Event

Centre de Congrès Pierre-Baudis, Toulouse, France

<https://esww2023.org/>

France is pleased host to European Space Weather Week (ESWW) on 20-24th November 2023 at the Centre de Congrès Pierre-Baudis in Toulouse. This is the 19th in the series of annual events. This year will again be a fully hybrid event, with some attendees in-person and others joining virtually. We intend to offer all attendees an engaging and interactive experience with access to a range of high-quality presentations, topical discussion meetings, posters and quick views, a hybrid fair, and plenty of networking opportunities.

ESWW has the central aim of bringing together the diverse groups in Europe, and from across the globe, working on different aspects of Space Weather and Space Climate. Such groups include scientists, engineers, satellite operators, power grid technicians, communication and navigation specialists, people working in aviation, space weather service providers, and STEM practitioners who play an important role in student development, to name but a few. ESWW is highly interdisciplinary by nature and it actively promotes investigation of new technologies and approaches as well as providing a forum for knowledge exchange with opportunities to discuss the latest on all aspects of space weather and space climate. This also includes the strategies needed to deal with the forecast, risks, and potential impacts to satellite and spacecraft operations as well as the technological and socio-economics impacts that space weather poses to the Earth environment, human society and our infrastructure.

The following pages detail the sponsorship and fair stand opportunities as at the time of receiving this brochure:

Sponsorship

We invite sponsorship from organizations working within the space sector or within industries and operations which can be impacted by space weather, such as satellite operators, the aviation and marine sectors, power grid technicians, communications, and navigation specialists. We would also be keen to have sponsorship partners who support the work of scientists and engineers, or those involved in machine learning, AI, researchers involved in the development and mechanics and materials for use in space, and space tourism. By working together we can develop a better understanding of solar activity and its impact on space operations and the Earth environment and seek to enhance space weather forecasting and warning systems.

Your sponsorship contributes towards the cost of managing the event, which enables a greater level of participation and supports the development of the community, particularly young researchers from across the globe and aids European engagement on a global scale.

 During the Renaissance the pigments provided by the pastel flower were used widely to color textile finding its land of predilection in Occitanie which became the leader of the European trade in blue. Toulouse became richer and became a real crossroads. Exporting pastel all over the world, the merchants made their fortune and the architecture of Toulouse was strongly influenced by this sudden wealth. The most famous architects built sublime private mansions for these rich merchants. Among the most beautiful, the hotel d'Assézat, masterpiece of the classical Renaissance, or the hotel de Bernuy whose house is one of the highest in the city.

 Introduced in France under Napoleon III, a variety of Violette coming from the North of Italy was for a long time called "the Parma". It was then cultivated in the market garden area north of Toulouse (Lalande, Aucamville, Saint Jory...). It is one of the symbols of this area, and has worn its colors with dignity since 1985, when the name "Violette de Toulouse" became a registered trademark. At the beginning of the 19th century, 600 families lived in winter from the sale of this cut flower, destined to the realization of round bouquets which were sold by weight. Very fashionable, it was exported to England, Germany, Russia, and even to Morocco thanks to the Aéropostale.

* Had to be! Toulouse is "La Ville Rose" after all...
